Valley Horse Show

For five years Sandra McKeon's Carousel Vacation Celebration has been a horse show without a home. The "A" American Horse Show Association event has been held a sundry California locations.

Lots of hard work and determination brought the event to Carmel Valley's Trail and Saddle Club, along with 178 entries.

McKeon described the participants as an "upper crust group of horse riders and lovers..." all part of that rare breed of California horse people who ride flat saddle.

The four day "celebration" included a $5,000.00 speed jumping competition, with the purse donated by Carmel Valley's Paul Soares.

Carousel's secretary Marnye Elliott estimated that "over 25% of the entries are from Carmel Valley." Carousel promises to have a complete list of winners for publication in The Sun next week.

However, it is known that Abbigail Dice, riding Tony the Tiger posted winnings in the Children's Hunter division.

Carousel is a division of Larry Langer's Equestrian Sports, which is responsible for 28 shows each year in the western United States. Carousel puts on eight shows in addition to the Langer productions.

McKeon functions as president of Carousel and is the working show manager. As part of the preparation for the show she hired Gary Paddock and Childrens Hunters on the field.

CUSD Board Meeting

Teachers may see 5% increase in salaries

by Mary Beth Bowman

Carmel Unified School District teachers are likely to see a five percent increase in their salaries effective July 1 for the 1994/1995 school year. The negotiations between the teachers' association and the CUSD Board of Education are coming to a close, with a final approval vote scheduled for July 5.

The proposed ACT collective bargaining agreement and agreements with non-represented employee groups were made public at last week's CUSD Board meeting. Part of the agreement includes a Blue Cross health insurance plan that will probably begin September 1. The plan will include deductibles, co-pay and employee participation.

The Board also approved specific fee and salary schedule increases for the Carmel Child Development Center and the River Rec/Tularcitos Rex School-age Child Care Program. Fees will rise by three percent effect August 1. The salary schedule increase will also be three percent with a onetime only $300 bonus for full-time (eight hours per day) employees.

Those employed less than full time will receive a pro-rata share of the $300 bonus.

District Attorney warns about "gifting network"

Monterey County District Attorney Dean Flippo has issued a consumer warning alerting residents about a questionable "gifting network." The District Attorney's Office recently received a report of an operation which promises a method for receiving $12,000. Participants say they got involved out of friendship or through business relationships.

It is an endless chain scheme in which each participant makes a commitment to bring in at least one more person, so that when thirty-two people are involved in a "network," the participant at the bottom rises to the chairperson level and, supposedly, receives $12,000. Each participant is required to pay $1,500 as an "unconditional gift."

According to the materials, the IRS permits this kind of gift-giving. It was this reference to the tax code that first brought the case to the attention of the Monterey County District Attorney. Would-be participants were assured it was perfectly legal to make a "gift" to the head of this "network." Unsuspecting consumers called their tax consultant who, in turn, called the District Attorney's Office.

Mr. Flippo warns that such "endless chain schemes" are a violation of California Penal Code section 327, allowing for a prison sentence of up to three years.

Carmel Valley Community Center offers Aikido

On any Monday or Wednesday evening you can look through the windows of the auditorium at the Community Center and see a group of people whirling and twirling and throwing each other to the ground.

The person who gets thrown performs a nifty roll and is on her feet in a second, ready for more. Yes, I said her. The group is composed of men AND women throwing each other. The women hold their own and do a good job of performing the throws and rolls. It's great to see a small woman tossing a grown man across the room. Yet, judging from the smiles and laughter in the group, these people appear to be having great fun.

The instructor stepped outside the door and asked if I wanted to come inside, have a seat, and watch up close. Once inside, someone in the group would occasionally cast a glance my way, but they were too busy to pay me much mind.

I was surprised to see several Village faces in the class. Up close the students were indeed smiling, but the concentration in their eyes was plain to see. It didn't take long to figure out why.

The simple twirling movements are actually difficult to perform. The instructor would demonstrate parts of a movement, or show the entire movement, and still the students struggled. The students frequently switch partners to try again. Some students looked good, some needed more work, but all looked like they were on the verge of solving some intricate puzzle. The students may have appeared somewhat confused after a few attempts, but they were nevertheless fascinated by their study.

The instructor came over and said, "Well, what do you think?"

I said, "What are you doing? What do you call this?" He laughed under his breath and told me it was aikido.

Meanwhile, the students were carrying on by themselves. Some were having a little difficulty, but still working to get the movements down pat. Occasionally a twosome would laugh although they had not exchanged any words. Something was funny to them - they continued to train without interruption; they seemed to be in their own world.

I thought to myself, "What concentration!"

The instructor said aikido is a new martial art with deep roots to traditional jujitsu. It has a physical and philosophical side; both are flexible yet strong. He said aikido does not try to beat the other person, it tries to use the other person's force to prevent injury to anyone. The aikido student tries to resolve his or her own personal weakness rather than try to overcome someone else's problems.

The biggest victories come from within, not by demonstrating superior force over someone else.

Not knowing what to say, I asked him how long it takes to get a black belt. He laughed quietly and almost shook his head as he looked over to the class, then said to me, "Well, if you study hard, maybe a week or two." He looked back at me and smiled, and I knew I had asked a really stupid question. He was making gentle fun of my question. We laughed. I blushed slightly. He told me to stay as long as I wanted, but he had a class to teach.

He clapped his hands together loudly and the classmates bowed Japanese style to each other and quickly formed a line on one side of the room. The instructor continued to demonstrate the technique of the night as if he had not missed a beat.

You should have seen the look on the faces of the students. They loved it. They seemed to be just centimeters from solving their puzzle.

Classes are Monday and Wednesday, 6:30 to 8 p.m., in the auditorium of the Community Center, and Saturday, 12 p.m. near the gazebo. For more information, call 659-1222. Ask for Steve.

Summer reading fun at local library

Children can climb aboard the magic bus for a summer of reading fun and adventure at any branch of the Monterey County Free Libraries.

Reading is a Magic Trip is the theme for the County Library's 1994 Summer Reading Program. This year's program will continue through August 6.

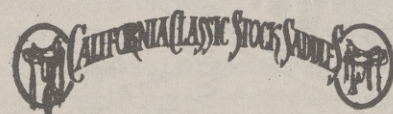

Children of all ages may register any time during the seven-week program at one of the library's 15 branches and 2 bookmobiles.

Participants will receive a reading record log and stickers for books they read during the summer. They will also receive coloring sheets and drawing and word-game activities each week. A certificate of achievement will be presented to each reader at the end of the program.

The annual county-wide program is designed to encourage young people to enjoy reading throughout the year and to make them aware of the books available at their local public libraries.

In addition to summer reading activities, many library branches are scheduling special programs throughout the summer.

For more information about or to register for the Summer Reading Program, contact a Monterey County Free Libraries branch in Carmel Valley or Big Sur.

How do you feel on the last day of kindergarten? (Asked of the kindergarten teachers at Tularcitos Elementary School after the Mini Olympics closing event.)

HOLLY DECKER

I think the mini olympics is a wonderful way to end the year. All the children are successful and ends them off for a positive start for first grade. I can't think of them leaving or I'll start to cry.

CAROL COVELL

I feel great! I think the kids had a wonderful time today and the parents as well. I get goosebumps when they start the olympic run to light the torch.

JUDITH GOLDMAN

Sad. And proud of the children and how far they've come. I've really enjoyed my first year, since I'm the new kid on the block. I'm excited that it's summer and I get to spend time with my family.

JUDY LEAVELLE

Yippie Yea! Ky-O, Ky-A! After teaching for the past 25 years, I always miss the kids during the summer. But I am looking forward to spending time with my horses, my garden and my dog.

CUSD Meeting

The child care program coordinators justified the request by stating within their proposal that fees have not been raised for two to four years, depending on the program. Also, the child development teachers have not received a raise in two years.

The proposal states that the programs have had "no (staff) turnover for many years," despite figures that proclaim a 60-80 percent turnover in child development staffs statewide.

After repeated study sessions and revisions, the Board adopted the 1994-1995 budget. Board President Gary Gray said he thought the board's most important task is to "preserve, protect and properly spend" the $17 million dollar budget.

Judy Long, director of the district's business and support services, indicated that this year's budget takes into account potential personnel salary increases and it also features a significant number of capital projects. These projects cover maintenance, construction, repair, remodeling, expansion and sites needed to accommodate the district's growth.

Looking ahead as to how the district can keep pace with modernization and growth demands, the Board listened to guest speaker David Downing describe various ways the district can raise money.

Downing, a school facilities consultant, described the pros and cons of applying for a modernization grant, levying parcel taxes, offering bond issues and asserting developer fees.

Based on the age of the district's school facilities and current value of modernizing per square foot, Downing told Board members the CUSD has the potential to receive eight and a half million dollars in modernization grant money from the state -- but there is a catch.

In the process of applying for the grant, the district would be best served, he said, if it were either or both a year-round school district and/or was part of the "50/50" program. Downing explained CUSD could easily receive a waiver for being year-round based on slow growth projections. However, the 50/50, or matching fund, program that involves the district coming up with half of the money for the state to match, is a little harder to create.

The district does not have to have a 50/50 program currently in place in order to apply for the grant -- but once one is established, the state-level approving authorities are likely to give CUSD higher priority in how quickly the grant is approved and funded, Downing said.

The Board collectively decided to take Downing's information back to the committee/task force level before considering action on the formal agenda.

CUSD unveils facility improvement plan

by Mary Beth Bowman

Carmel Unified School District Superintendent Vance Baldwin and Tularcitos Principal Karin Camilli unveiled blueprint plans to the public that outline future repair/remodeling/expansion work scheduled to restore the Tularcitos multipurpose room that burned in a fire earlier this year.

Camilli was particularly excited about the expansion of the room. "We've grown so much in the last five years and really have been crunched for space," she noted.

Camilli told board members that a committee compiled a "wish list" and met with two architects to come up with the ideal buildings for students and teachers alike.

The new facility, expected to be complete sometime next spring, will feature new restrooms with handicap access, asbestos abatement in the floor tile, new roofing and a two-tiered eating area that will replace the damaged patio lunch area.

There will be more shade cover outdoors for the little (and big) lunchers, too. The committee considered improvements that will result in a more usable stage, a real ceramics work area, a fully functional computer lab and a more efficient teacher workroom space separated from the com-flight training at a local airport conducted by a flying club or fixed base operator. Most students pursue their flight training concurrently with ground school, flying about once a week. It is feasible to earn both a Private Pilot Certificate and an Instrument rating in one year's time.

A second year of ground school and flight training could lead to a Commercial Pilot Certificate and possibly a Multi-engine Airplane Rating and/or the title of Certificated Flight Instructor.

The aviation class will meet in Lecture Forum 102 on campus on Tuesdays, from 7 to 10 p.m. beginning August 30.

Business students interested in the global picture can now earn an Associate in Science degree in International Business at Monterey Peninsula College.

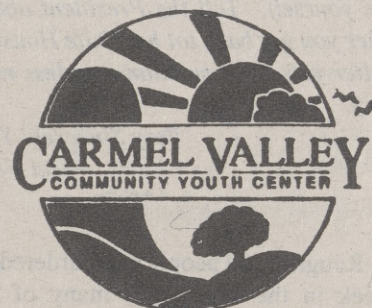

Three courses required for the International Business program will be offered during the Fall Semester, beginning August 29.

Survey of International Business and Management, a three-unit course, meets from 6 to 9 p.m. on Wednesdays with Dr. Judee Timm as the instructor. International Accounting Perspectives, taught by David Wells, is an eight-week course meeting from 6 to 10 p.m. on Thursdays, September 1 through October 20. The third course, Introduction to Importing/Exporting, will meet from 8:10 to 9 a.m. Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays. Frank Moore is the instructor.

WHAT'S NEXT? BY MEL VERCOE

Dear Mrs. Clinton,

I know your husband is sincere in everything he does, but he appears to be pushing himself too hard, and it doesn't help that he somehow got the idea that he was elected to be Emperor of the World, instead of just President of the United States.

His determination to get something going against North Korea was more than just a terribly stupid error. It was a pressure buildup caused partly by an overload of frustrations and annoyances and unfair criticisms, and partly by war-hawk policy advisers, pitiful excuses for advisers, to say the least.

Roughly 500 people are murdered each week in the U.S. Not many of these murders get national news coverage. I suppose there will be snow on our local hills, perhaps in January, before we average noncriminals can turn on a radio or a TV without getting a dose of rehashing of the OJ Simpson case. I get the impression that one heck of a lot of people want this great football hero to be released on probation, and eventually look down at the rest of us from Mt. Rushmore.

Granted, Jimmy Carter embarrassed Pres. Clinton by going to North Korea for a discussion with the President of North Korea, which resolved some idiotic animosities that had been festering for a couple of generations. It was certainly time for somebody to show the common sense and initiative to do it. In return, our Pres. Clinton embarrassed our whole country by openly resenting Jimmy Carter's fortunate and timely action. Most of us (I hope) have been painfully aware that one totally senseless war in Korea (54,000 U.S. dead) was already one too many, and that it is time for our Pentagon, and our pitiful cloak-and-dagger CIA, and our President's war-hawk advisers to kind of braunch out for better ways to show how important they are to our taxpayers, who pay their salaries.

FROM WHERE I STAND BY LEE PHELPS

Once upon a time . . .

That's how most fairy tales begin, remember? There is, of course, one kind of fairy tale which has a different beginning. It's a favorite of candidates for elective office, and it goes like this: "After I'm elected . . ." With everything that follows an exercise in deceit, duplicity and downright lying.

Fairy tales are myths. There are many, many myths which are associated with politics, especially in the State of California. One of the more prevalent is the myth that the State Constitution requires the legislature to produce a balanced budget each year (which, by extension, would prohibit state deficit-spending).

There's just one problem: it simply isn't true. Nowhere in the California Constitution is there any requirement that our legislators enact a balanced budget. The only constitutional requirement is that the legislature enact a budget and send it to the governor by June 15th, annually.

The "balanced budget myth" derives from Article IV, Sec. 12, California Constitution, which requires that the Governor submit a proposed state budget to the legislature within the first ten days of each calendar year. And further, that the governor make recommendations to the legislature about where to get additional revenues, if the budget he - or she - submits proposes spending in excess of what estimated revenues will support.

Editorial pages are a vital part of every community newspaper. They are the space where we have an opportunity to air our concerns and point out recognition for people or events that has been missed in the routine of normal news coverage. These pages are also a venue for the expression of opinion. Mel and Lee are both solid writers of their opinions. Their opinions are not necessarily the opinions of the Carmel Valley Sun, nor are they relevant to the everyday local issue in the valley.

Neither Lee or Mel are paid for their writing. They write because they want to express themselves. We would like recruit the regular opinion writing of some people from Carmel Valley. This offering is open to responsible liberals, conservatives and talented reactionaries alike.

There are major issues - water, traffic, education, fire protection, development, ecology and more which have real or potential impact on this near perfect valley we share. We need writers to bring these issues and their own private feelings out into the open. This is your newspaper! Use it!

Key word? Recommendations. And anyone old enough to read - who does read - knows what happens to recommendations may by the (Republican) governor to the (Democrat-controlled) legislature.

There's another interesting and associated myth, here: that if the constitution requires something, it must be done. Sadly, it just ain't so. For proof, just look at that June 15th annual constitutional deadline for the legislature to pass a budget, and send it to the governor. It hasn't happened more than a couple of times in the last twenty years. The legislature regularly and deliberately ignores the constitutional mandate, and gets away with it.

Why? Because the state constitution has no teeth. Nowhere does it contain any provision for punishing legislatures who, for partisan - often petty - political reasons, defy or just ignore the "pass a budget by June 15th" constitutional mandate. So the next time some dimwit media type - print or broadcast - pontificates on the Balanced State Budget requirement, you'll know he - or she - is perpetuating a myth, telling a fairy tale. And, if they're that ignorant, you'd better be careful about how much you believe of what they report about other political matters.

That's how it seems, from where I stand. Lee A. Phelps is the founder of ACTIV - Alliance of California Taxpayers and Involved Voters - a nonprofit, nonpartisan, and all-volunteer statewide organization: PO Box 330, Aptos, CA 95001.

Dear Editor, Carmel Valley Sun:

I noticed in your last publication you had listed the fifth grade graduates of Carmel River School and thought you might like to do the same to our Carmel Valley Tularcitos graduates!

Also, I've enclosed a letter of thank you to Mr. Ed Haber at Quail Lodge for his generous donation of a tent for our "outdoor" celebration since our multi-purpose room has yet to be rebuilt. If it is appropriate for your "Letters to the Editor," it would be great to let our community know how much we at Tularcitos appreciate all they do.

On another matter -- Little League: Our major team the Lions (10-12 year olds) came in first place this year. They will compete in the Tournament of Champions on July 2 at 10 a.m. at the Carmel Valley Little League field against King City. Following the game, The Running Iron Restaurant, their sponsor, is treating the boys and coaches to a celebration feast. I thought it would be nice if you would be interested in covering the game -- or the feast and let our community know what a terrific bunch of kids and parents we have in Carmel Valley!

Dear Editor, Carmel Valley Sun

When a pursuit crash takes a life, particularly that of a bystander (in 1993 there were eight such deaths in 7,781 pursuits), the ensuing emotional tide temporarily overwhelms logic. The family that loses a loved one in a pursuit crash reaches for the solace of prevention: "Let's not repeat this needless tragedy. Let's do away with police pursuits." For the California Highway Patrol -- and every police agency that engages in pursuits -- the challenge remains; that of keeping the public view of pursuits on an even keel.

I have appeared on Donahue and other high-visibility programs to explain the police position, which I believe should be an extension of what is (or should be) society's position. Pursuits are a critical law enforcement tool. Without the authority to pursue, we submit to the criminal. Society throws in the towel.

This leaves the public floating on a sea of mistaken impressions, with no anchoring explanation of what happens in most pursuits -- an apprehension, nothing else. The thin veneer of knowledge about how pursuits really work means most people know nothing of the tight controls police put on the process.

Responsible police agencies define when and how pursuits may be conducted, when they should be called off (the CHP aborts about one in five pursuits), and what disciplinary action awaits officers who violate policy.

All of which outlines the need for intensive training. CHP cadet trainees receive 40-48 hours of behind-the-wheel enforcement driving, including a practical problem in pursuit. A driving instructor flees, and the cadet must pursue and apprehend -- safely. Cadets who fail this (or any major element of driver training) don't become Highway Patrol officers.

Police management holds the final key to the proper conduct of pursuits: Administrative review of every pursuit -- the ones that go right, as well as those ending in a crash. Highway Patrol pursuit philosophy can be summed up this way: Establish a firm policy, train officers thoroughly, review every pursuit, correct mistakes, discipline those who violate policy.

The idea is to rule emotions out of the process, to the fullest extent we can. The officer in a pursuit should be responding to mental calculations, not emotional stimuli.

Dear Editor, Carmel Valley Sun:

The students and parents of the fifth grade class of Tularcitos Elementary School, extend our sincere gratitude to Mr. Ed Haber and his staff for their overwhelming generosity in donating the fabulous tent for our graduation ceremony held last week.

The weather was warm, the surroundings beautiful; we had an audience of very proud family members and, best of all, 85 children who I'm sure will remember that day for the rest of their lives!

We are extremely fortunate to have such a wonderful neighbor like Mr. Haber who has contributed so much to us in the past and, when the need was great, came through in our our of need.

Although is generosity was publicly acknowledged during the ceremony by our principal Karin Camilli, and was met with robust and sustained applause, I felt it was important that everyone knows just how thankful we all are.

Sincerely,
Jeanne L. Hale

Founder of TASK receives prestigious award

Carmel Valley psychologist Janet Hurley, founder of TASK (Take A Stand for Kids), a child abuse prevention organization, received the prestigious Talcott Bates Award recently from the Child Abuse Prevention Council of Monterey County (CAPC). Hurley was honored for her "exceptional dedication and commitment to the prevention of child abuse."

Hurley also received a Certificate of Special Congressional recognition from Congressman Sam Farr, who wrote, "Your dedication to the issue of child abuse helps to heal those who suffer the greatest. . . I greatly admire you for your perseverance and encourage you to continue your work that others may follow in your footsteps."

State Senator Henry J. Mello sent Hurley a special Certificate of Recognition as did Assemblyman Bruce McPherson.

Janet Hurley earned her bachelor's degree from Sacramento State College and taught physical education at Carmel Middle School for several years. During the summer months, she studied psychology at Sonoma State College and later earned her master's degree from Northern Arizona University in Flagstaff.

In her practice, Hurley treated adults who were abused as children. "Most people are aware of physical and sexual child abuse," she said, "but few realize what experts now know: children also suffer from emotional, spiritual, and intellectual abuse."

Following a long-held dream to educate adults to become aware of how and when child abuse happens, Hurley called a meeting. "I told those I had invited that I knew what needed to happen, but didn't know how to do it," she said. Willing hands responded, and TASK was born.

Today, TASK's outreach touches an ever-expanding number of people through workshops, lectures, and In-Home Events. These activities widen the circle of awareness that what people do to their children was once done to them.

TASK's sole mission is education. According to its brochure, TASK is "a network of people whose purpose is to educate in areas of child abuse. We are a grass roots movement . . . We are people empowering people—coming from a basis of love and support rather than blame, shame, or punishment."

Janet Hurley believes the TASK model will be used in other cities and towns as people of goodwill start to take action against all forms of child abuse. "We must work toward preventing child abuse," she said. "People need to help people to Take a Stand for Kids."

Four Carmel High School students were honored by the Board of Directors of the Carmel Chapter of the American Red Cross on April 24th for their contribution to the community.

The students, Jessica Kattan, Arlyn Petalver and Heather Whipple of Carmel and Courtney Kaufman of Carmel Valley, served as instructors of a new course about first aid for elementary school students called First Aid for Children Today (FACT). The girls completed the course of instruction in November 1993 qualifying them to teach FACT, and throughout the 2nd semester at school, they taught the children in grades K-3 at Carmel Elementary School in Carmel Valley once each week.

The students' instructor, Evey Torres Russo, said, "These students are to be admired for their conscientious endeavors and their willingness to devote the many hours of preparation as well as presentation time that it takes to be a teacher."

"I feel these girls have gone above and beyond the requirements for completing this phase of their community service, especially because of the extra time and devotion it takes for anyone to be a good teacher."

In addition to partially fulfilling their community service requirement toward graduation, each student received a Community Service Award certificate from the Red Cross Chapter commending them for their successful participation in the program.

Transportation Agency seeks additional members to serve

The Transportation Agency for Monterey County (TAMC) is seeking additional members to serve on its Citizens Advisory Committee (CAC) for transportation issues facing Monterey County.

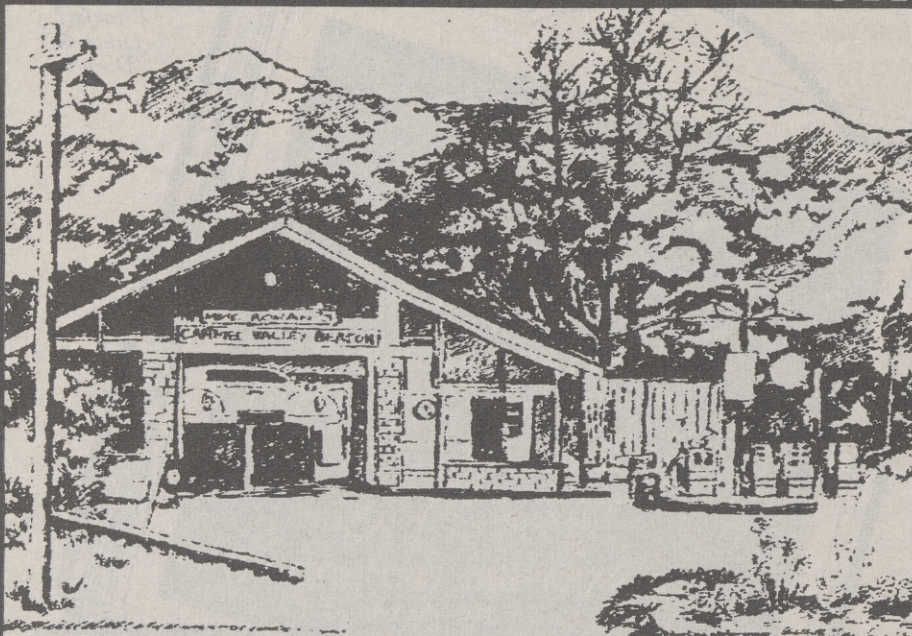

The purpose of the Citizens Advisory Committee (CAC) is to advise the TAMC on community needs, concerns, goals, and objectives with regard to transportation. The CAC advises the Transportation Agency on issues related to traffic congestion, transportation planning and all forms of transportation, including streets and roads, public bus and rail transit, bicycle and pedestrian facilities, and transportation for the elderly and disabled. The CAC reviews and comments on transportation planning documents and participates in community awareness programs.

Meetings are held four times a year in the evening hours, at various locations in Monterey County. In addition, special workshops and public scoping sessions are held on major plans and special studies.

Persons interested in serving on the CAC should send a letter of interest describing their background and reasons for wanting to serve to: Transportation Agency for Monterey County, 312 East Alisal Street, Salinas, CA 93901, Attn.: Citizens Advisory Committee. Inquiries must be received by August 1, 1994. For further information, please contact Wendy Murphy, TAMC staff, at 755-4835 or 647-7777.

IN THE VILLAGE

OUR ANIMAL FRIENDS BY ARABY COLTON

Brother Coyote

Have you ever heard a coyote sing in our area? I haven't, and I've lived here for over twenty years. We just don't have many of them anymore.

But in nature's plan the little prairie wolf is numerous because he is an enormously valuable citizen. He is the prime rodenticide, depending for his food on rabbits, gophers, ground squirrels, rats and mice . . . also insects. And he is one of the clean-up-crew, disposing of the bodies of stillborn and disease-killed lambs and calves, the wounded deer and birds left by hunters, the carcasses of dead animals.

What is he like, this little wolf? He is small, weighing only about thirty pounds, tawny in color, with a sharp nose and pointed ears. He's very smart, a characteristic perhaps partly responsible for the fury of the campaign against him. Added to the frontiersman's fear of everything wild was the indignity at being outwitted by this creature. The Indians believed the coyote would survive man on this earth.

He is an affectionate and loyal mate, often staying with a trapped mate, and bringing it food. J. Frank Dobie, in The Voice of the Coyote, tells how a hunter, having wounded one of three coyotes, watched, unbelieving, as the other two came up to the wounded one, and, one on each side, supported it to cover and safety.

She, and he, is a protective, solicitous, self-sacrificing parent. If she fears for her pups the mother may move them to a different place every night. In 1953, in Idaho, a trapper killed all nine of a mother coyote's pups. The mother got away. A few days later, investigating a different den, from which she emerged, he found two Collie pups. The desolate mother had stolen them from a dog at a sheep camp.

The horrors of our war on the coyote are almost unbelievable. Run down and beaten to death by snowmobilers, shot from planes, poisoned, gutted alive to make scent lure to trap more coyotes, hung, still living, on fences, turned out, jaws wired shut, to starve to death . . . only a few of our practices.

But some stock raisers are discovering the European Guarding Dog, that protection against wolves and bears used in Europe and Asia for two-thousand years. Big, docile unless provoked, but lethal fighters if their stock are threatened, the European Guarding Dog is ideal, ecologically beneficent protection of stock against coyotes . . . or, frequently more dangerous, the all too common feral dog pack.

Family business profile

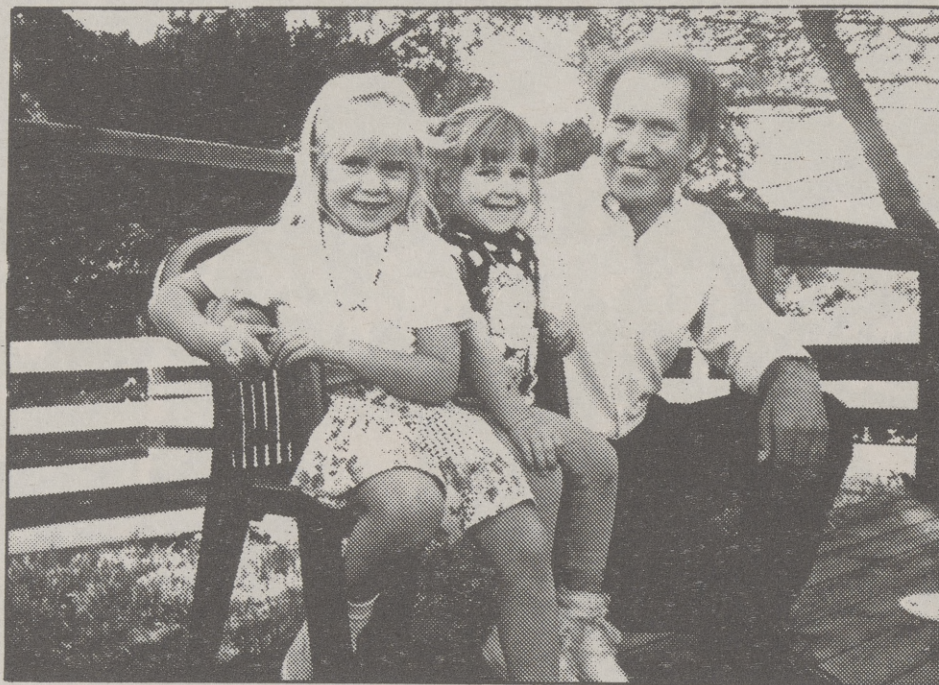

by Mary Beth Bowman

1947 was a good year, at least for Lou Allaire. That was the year he struck out on his own in the insurance business. That was also the year he moved into his house just below the CV Community Chapel with his new bride, Ruth. Forty-seven years and four children later, they are still there. The house grew as the family grew.

Youngest son Matt, who continues the Allaire insurance business tradition, refers to it as the "mystery house." He and his dad trade verbal punches and enjoy a special rapport. Although Matt went to company and insurance trade schools to learn the ropes, he credits his father's help as Lou provided "immense knowledge, support and guidance."

Lou is taking more of a back seat in the business these days. He refers to himself as the "old advisor," and spends time equally between office, home and hobbies. He is an avid recycler and a fanatic for airplanes. Every so often a long-time CV resident will look up at a white plane buzzing overhead and remark, "There goes Lou Allaire."

A few years back some clogged arteries slowed Lou down a bit, Matt said, so he flies his 1947 Cessna 140 with a co-pilot and attends to business on the ground, looking after the operation and maintenance of the CV airport. Lou's interest in planes began as a child in grammar school. He and his buddies would buy the ten cent kits and build model planes. Then as the planes wore out, they would set them on fire and pretend they were "going down in flames."

As an adult, Lou got close to seeing the real thing when he served with the U.S. Air Force from 1943 to 1946 as a flight radio operator in the South Pacific. In 1950, he was still a member of the Air Force reserves and he was recalled into the service. When he got out again, he used the GI Bill for flying. "In 1970 I got the urge again," he confessed.

Indirectly, it was Lou's time in the service that affected his choice of careers. "I've always like the out-of-doors (having grown up in the Carmel Valley area), so I thought I would be a forest ranger. I could picture myself in the jodhpurs and hat like the rangers at Yosemite and just knew the girls would fall all over me," he grins charmingly.

So he and a pal set off for UC Davis to major in Forestry. It didn't last long. "The war matured us over the other kids attending school," Lou recalls, adding, "we decided we couldn't stand it and packed our bags." On the way home he dropped in at Stanford University to take the aptitude test and found that his likely career choices did include forestry, but it was number three on the list. At the top of the list was insurance or banking and engineering.

Lou got his start in insurance with P. A. McCreery in Carmel. McCreery, whom Lou calls "Mac," also had a son named Lew, who at the time was attending the University of Hawaii. "I picked up quite a bit (working with McCreery), the ins and outs. It worked out," Lou said.

Allaire Insurance is the only property and casualty insurance office in the village and is well known for having been around so long. Over forty years in business connotes success, but Lou downplays his good fortune, saying "Everybody needs insurance." He also said it helps to do a "decent job of servicing accounts and taking care of clients."

He and Matt both declare the business would fall apart without the women who help run it. Lou's wife, Ruth, is partner with Matt and takes on the tasks of accounting and bookkeeping. The staff mainstay, though, is JoAnn Wellborn. "This office wouldn't be open without her," Matt acknowledged. Wellborn is phone receptionist, customer service representative and office manager all in one. "She's great with people," Matt said, "she does everything."

When Matt is not in the office, he likes to spend time with his wife Carol and their two little girls, Danielle, 6 and Larissa (known as Lacy) who will soon turn 4. He also likes to work out with weights and spend time outdoors. Carol is a senior account clerk with the Monterey County court system.

Both generations of Allaires enjoy hiking, backpacking and water sports. Lou would take Matt and his brothers, David and Tom and sister, Davette out on excursions like hiking along Pine Ridge. As they tell the story, Lou remembers the beautiful stars. Matt remembers the spiders.

Matt and Lou are nearly the epitome of the phrase "like father, like son." Both were married at the Carmel Mission. Both have wives that enjoy gardening and outdoor activities and both have volunteered for the Fire Department. Lou spent 20-plus years as a volunteer fireman and Matt has volunteered the last ten years.

Seeing the two together, it is evident Matt and Lou are a team in business and in family life. Matt is especially happy to have a "reliable babysitter." "He (Lou) is just excellent with the girls. Ask them what they want to do and it is always, 'go down to see Papa, play at Papa's house,'" Matt said. So once in a while you might catch a youthful-looking older gentleman pulling a wagon stuffed with pillows and little girls.

Both men also influence their peers and colleagues with their leadership. In 1991, Matt was president of the Independent Insurance Agents and Brokers of Monterey County. Under his leadership, the individual associations of Monterey and Salinas merged. Coincidentally, many moons ago when Lou was president, he convinced Carmel and Monterey to join together.

Or sometimes they go to the Rock House where they pull weeds and have a picnic. The family tradition continues as "Papa" shows the youngest Allaires "the ins and outs" of nature and fun.

McKeon says she would like to hold the event in Carmel Valley again next year and expects it to be even more popular. Yet, she says she will limit entrants to 170 to 190, to keep things exclusive and manageable.

The 59 year old McKeon is a hands-on manager, riding the area in an electric golf cart, answering questions and giving orders from her own $20,000.00 two way radio system.

Entrant and event information is fully computerized. Event administration, conducted from the clubhouse, included fax, photocopy, and on line computers.

McKeon and her crew of 25 all stayed in a Carmel Valley motel, as did many of the entrants. Judges for the English style event where Meredith McLaughlin from Virginia, John Roper from Tennessee and Peggy Packrell from Sacramento.

McKeon began her horse riding career as a three year old when her grandfather Bendix Miller gave her a shetland pony named Tiny, who had been used by his sausage company to lead cattle onto freight cars.

She then received 10 lessons at the Cressmont School at Mills College, under the direction of Cornelius Cress. McKeon calls it, "...spit and polish english, with red jackets..."

By age nine, McKeon says she was jumping five feet, aided by the teaching of Barbara Worth and Sylvia Brooks.

At tender age of 14 McKeon says she the zone 10 selection trials for the Olympics held at Pebble Beach on a horse called Carousel Clown. Her parents declined the Olympic invitation for her, citing the importance of her education.

Pebble Beach Horse Show

Kelly Batchelor of Soquel was Open Equitation Champion at the Third Annual Josephine Kernes Memorial Benefit Horse Show held on Sunday, June 12th, at the Pebble Beach Equestrian Center. Batchelor's name will be engraved on the perpetual trophy which was presented by Board President Chris Wood and Board Member Carl Zerbe.

According to Wood, the benefit met its financial goal and proceeds will be used to fund the Pool's swim and exercise program for over 150 disabled children and adults. Major benefactors included Zerbe, Buck and Lewis, Professional Law Corporation; Del Monte Glass; Flaherty's Seafood Grill, and Susie Gallagher, Wood announced.

"So many people made this event possible," Wood said, "but my special thanks go to two longtime friends: Tim Postal, Director of the Pebble Beach Equestrian Center for letting us use the Equestrian Center, and to Michelle Rush, Show Manager and Course Designer, who gave so generously so many hours of her time."

Winners of the two Kernes Medal Classes were Kylie Morse of Carmel, for 17 and Under, and Pamela Smith of Pebble Beach for 18 and Over. Show Champion and Reserve Champion ribbons were presented in eleven divisions. Winners included:

Briana Hewitt of Carmel Valley and Kylie Morse of Carmel 3'3" Division for 17 and Under; Rosie Marquart of Pacific Grove and Angie Hannas of Marina, 3' division for 17 and Under; Arielle Baker of Carmel and Brooke Steven of Monterey, 2'6" Division for ages 11 through 17; Becky Krone-Davis and Sara Gross of Salinas, 2'6" Division for age 10 and Under; Lauren Parks of Castroville and Janelle Barbier of Monterey 2' Division, age 11 through 17, and Robin Duffy of Carmel Valley and Ali Wasserman of Pebble Beach 2' Division for age 10 and Under.

Champion and Reserve ribbons for age 18 and over were presented to Sandy Grimmer of Pacific Grove, 3'3" Division; Pamela Smith of Pebble Beach and Jeanne Costello of Pacific Grove, 3' Division; Doug Talley of Salinas 2'6" Division; Michelle Derbonne of Pacific Grove and Tawni Jones of Carmel Valley, 2' Division, and in the Open 1'6" Division Mikaila Coates of Carmel and Logan Talbott of Carmel Valley.

Almost 100 rider and horse entries in the 49 classes of the show, according to Wood, made the 3rd Annual Kernes Benefit the most successful ever.

National Great American Fish Count

A number of agencies and organizations across the nation has teamed up to help organize the National Great American Fish Count for July 1 through July 10, 1994. They are hoping to generate public knowledge and interest in the diverse fishery resources of our nation. A local effort in the Monterey Bay area is being sponsored by the Monterey Bay National Marine Sanctuary, the Marine Conservation Network and PADI (Professional Association of Diving Instructors).

The intent will be to help resource managers identify long term trends in fish populations and raise public awareness on fishery resources. It is hoped that such information will help scientists understand vital resource dynamics and enable proactive resource conservation.

This project originally began back in 1992, when a small group of recreational divers conducted a fish census, modeling their efforts after the annual Audubon Christmas Bird Count. "Such beginnings were very modest," stated Terry Jackson, manager of the Monterey Bay National Marine Sanctuary. "However, the Audubon count began with just 25 observers in 1900 and now brings together over 22,000 people to count birds in 1,563 locations." The Great American Fish Count organizers intend to conduct identical fish counts every year. 647-4255.

CUSD Board two special meetings

by Mary Beth Bowman

The Carmel Unified School District Board of Education held two special meetings last week to consider timely issues involving facility improvements and budget issues.

After Carmel High School's graduation, the board met to approve the offering of the Golden Handshake Program to teachers (STRS members) retiring prior to the beginning of the 1994/95 school year.

Board President Gary Gray described the program as an incentive that encourages teachers on the higher end of the pay scale to consider retiring a little sooner. The assumption, he explained, is that they will be replaced with educators who have less seniority and who are earning a lower salary. The hoped-for end result is a healthier district budget in the future.

The district will accept early retirement applications from July 1 to August 30, 1994.

The Board awarded a bid for driveway improvements at the Metz site to The Don Chapin Company, general engineering contractors in Salinas.

Last Saturday Carmel Valley kids packed the pool at the Carmel Valley Community Center. The weather was perfect for the kids happy to be out of school for the summer.

REAL ESTATE BY RAND SMITH

There are a few golden rules when it comes to banks with respect to their lending policies.

1. Never loan money to people who need it.
2. The more attractive the interest rate, the more difficult it is to qualify for the loan.
3. He who has the gold makes the rules.

I know I'm being unfair to these institutions that are after all the cornerstones of our society.

Without banks, I wouldn't have my car, my furniture, my house. Without them I would have no credit, nor the revolving debt my credit brings. Am I not more free to live how I choose because of my ability to borrow? Why then do I feel more imprisoned when I get my bills?

Maybe this is why I get so mad at those who lend us money. Maybe it's because it's because we can't control the freedom they offer us. I met a young woman several years ago who had over 20 charge cards. Her attitude was if these companies gave her the credit, they must know more about her ability to pay than she ... after all, they trusted her enough to let her borrow!

On the other hand, how can some banks be so liberal with their granting credit, and so heartless with their collection policies? Many credit problems are the result of real misfortune: illness, accidents, job loss. But bad credit is our society's scarlet letter. Often it ruins people's lives.

As people reach financial hardships and get behind on bills, it becomes more and more difficult to get back on top again.

And many of these well employed people reach a point where they would like to participate in the American dream of owning their own home. That's when they get confronted with the "golden rules" above.

Because my job as a real estate agent requires me to figure out how to find buyers in this market, I have wondered why our system seems so merciless.

In my search I have discovered a company that seems to be destined to become a part of the industry of the 90's. It specializes in credit repair. As the economy gets tougher it seems more people are affected adversely on credit reports. But, according to Darius Livian of American Financial and Consumer Services, it's also because the credit reporting business has become so large.

"Credit reporting is a multi-billion dollar a year business," says Livian. For perspective he asks you to consider that "these companies are not the government. They are in the business of relaying derogatory information. The more derogatory information they can relay, the richer they get."

In my real estate practice I have been frustrated too often with dings suddenly appearing on a buyer's credit report. To close escrow, letters have to be written, sometimes co-signers must be brought in, or the whole loan program must be switched to less desirable terms. Often these dings are mistakes, but they still delay the deal for weeks while they're being corrected. Sometimes the deals fall through.

"Why, in this age of computer sophistication, do credit reporting bureaus still use partial names, partial addresses, and partial social security numbers?" Livian asks.

While these companies have had huge law suits in many states because of their inaccurate data, "it's profitable for them to keep the system," he claims.

His firm works to remove the derogatory items from credit reports, as opposed to other consumer credit organizations that simply help people establish payment programs.

Even if the bill is paid off, the ding can remain for seven years from the final payment. "Isn't it ironic that a murderer can get out of prison on probation after only five years, yet a stain on a credit can haunt you for nearly a decade?" Livian muses.

In a real estate market with such low interest rates and such large inventory, potential buyers who have credit problems can start a program to get their credit cleaned up and buy a home. Depending on the problems, AFCS can turn a declined loan application into an approved loan in a matter of weeks or months.

Bringing in a new segment of otherwise non-qualified buyers would obviously create new profits. But more importantly, it would create new homeowners.

community kitchen. "It will help us for another few years," Camilli said.

Baldwin estimated the project will cost up to $450,000. He predicted that a contractor will probably "come in under that" with a bid. The project will use general funds.

Another Tularcitos improvement project was given the green light after the board awarded a grading and paving improvement project to the Don Chapin Company of Salinas. Work will take place on Pilot Road and in the school's bus yard to create more parking for the preschool classroom.

The project will also involve preparing a "pad" for a new relocatable classroom set to come on July 12. Chapin's bid was listed at $29,900. The highest bidder, Granite Construction Co., offered $41,586.

Valley Investors

By Douglas Pease

We tend to hear what we want to hear. I met someone who had withdrawn her IRA assets, which were earning about 3%, to invest in something else which promised her there would be no tax consequences because the rules were different for someone her age.

When I checked, the accountant had told her that at 75 she was well beyond the age limit (59½) for tax penalties on premature withdrawals. But the withdrawal is still taxable as ordinary income... true for IRA withdrawals at any age.

Another elderly person assured me there would be no tax upon sale of her residence, because her husband had died a few years earlier and the property enjoyed a step-up in basis, to the point where any taxable profit would be offset by the onetime $125,000 exclusion for people 55 or older. That's what she wanted to hear, so she did not ask if her husband's death required any changes in the way the room they had rented out - and which she continued to rent out - was being depreciated. It did. A $35,000 taxable event, as it turned out, when the house sold and an accountant explained the part she didn't want to hear a few years earlier.

What's the point? When you hear something you want to hear, ask yourself if there was more you did not listen to. Especially if there was something you did not fully comprehend. Especially if there was money involved.

Test yourself: pick up an auto leasing contract at the next opportunity, and read every word of it. What did you want to hear? And what did you skim over? Right.

Free Report Reveals Secret To Getting The Highest Price When You Sell Home!

Carmel Valley, CA - With all of the ups and downs in the real estate market over the past several years, finally there is some good news for home sellers.

A FREE new market report has just been released that provides valuable information about how to position your home in the marketplace so you get the highest price possible.

For years, real estate agents have relied on local market figures to advise homeowners on how to determine the right selling price for their home. The problem is, these figures don't give you the total picture you need to get the highest price for your home when you sell!

It's not commonly known that, just understanding what is going on in your immediate neighborhood doesn't give you the complete information you need to get the maximum price for your home... or get it sold on time. Yet, too often sellers make this mistake.

Now, thanks to a new computer system, home sellers can get extremely accurate, up-to-the minute information that will help them get the highest price for their home when they sell."

The FREE REPORT is titled "How To Sell Your Home For The Highest Price", and also includes a computerized market report. If your home is currently listed for sale with a real estate broker, there are some restrictions on what information can be provided.

However, if you are about to put your home on the market for sale, the complete report can be provided to you without charge. The computerized market report alone could save you thousands when you sell your home!

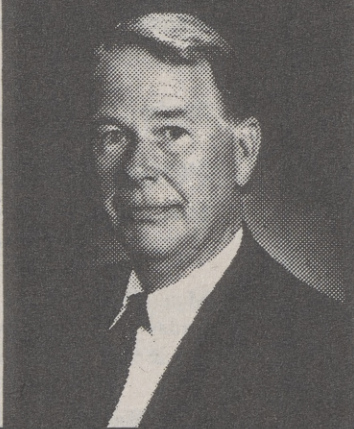

To get a copy of the report, you can call the message line below for a free recorded message and written copy of the report. Call now and find out what most buyers are hoping you never read about!

Answers about title insurance

What is title insurance? Newspapers refer to it in the weekly real estate sections and you hear about it in conversations with real estate brokers. If you've purchased a home you may be familiar with the benefits of title insurance. However, if this is your first home, you may wonder, "Why do I need yet another insurance policy?" While a number of issues can be raised by that question, we will start with a general answer.

The purchase of a home is one of the most expensive and important purchases you will ever make. You and your mortgage lender will want to make sure the property is indeed yours and that no one has any lien, claim or encumbrance on your property.

Q: What is the difference between title insurance and casualty insurance?

A: Title insurers work to identify and eliminate risk before issuing a title insurance policy. Casualty insurers assume risks.

Casualty insurance companies realize that a certain number of losses will occur each year in a given category (auto, fire, etc.) The insurers collect premiums monthly or annually from the policy holders to establish reserve funds in order to pay for expected losses.

Title companies work in a very different manner. Title insurance will indemnify you against loss under the terms of your policy, but title companies work in advance of issuing your policy to identify and eliminate potential risks and therefore prevent losses caused by title defects that may have been created in the past.

Title insurance also differs from casualty insurance in that the greatest part of the title insurance premium dollar goes towards risk elimination. Title companies maintain "title plants" which contain information regarding property transfers and liens reaching back many years. Maintaining these title plants, along with the searching and examining of title, is where most of your premium dollar goes.

Q: Who needs title insurance?

A: Buyers and lenders in real estate transactions need title insurance. Both want to know that the property they are involved with is insured against certain title defects. Title companies provide this needed insurance coverage subject to the terms of the policy. The seller, buyer and lender all benefit from the insurance by title companies.

Q: What does title insurance insure?

A: Title insurance offers protection against claims resulting from various defects (as set out in the policy) which may exist in the title to a specific parcel of real property, effective on the issue date of the policy. For example, a person might claim to have a deed or lease giving them ownership or the right to possess your property. Another person could claim to hold an easement giving them a right of access across your land. Yet another person may claim that they have a lien on your property securing the repayment of a debt. That property may be an empty lot or it may hold a 50-story office tower. Title companies work with all types of real property.

Q: What types of policies are available?

A: Title companies routinely issue two types of policies: An "owner's" policy which insures you, the homebuyer, for as long as you own the home; and a "lender's" policy which insures the priority of the lender's security interest over the claims that others may have in the property.

Q: What protection am I obtaining with my title policy?

A: A title insurance policy contains provisions for the payment of the legal fees in defense of a claim against your property which is covered under your policy. It also contains provisions for indemnification against losses which result from a covered claim. A premium is paid at the close of a transaction. There are no continuing premiums due, as there are with other types of insurance.

Q: What are the chances of ever using my title policy?

A: In essence, by acquiring your policy, you derive the important knowledge that recorded matters have been search and examined so that title insurance covering your property can be issued. Because we are risk eliminators, the probability of exercising your right to make a claim is very low. However, claims against your property may not be valid, making the continuous protection of the policy all the more important. When a title company provides a legal defense against claims covered by your title insurance policy, the savings to you for that legal defense alone will greatly exceed the one-time premium.

Q: What if I am buying property from someone I know?

A: You may not know the owner as well as you think you do. People undergo changes in their personal lives that may affect title to their property. People get divorced, change their wills, engage in transactions that limit the use of the property and have liens and judgments placed against them personally for various reasons.
